

- Verbal and written directions are given to virtual students, as well as communication with parents to explain the independent learning activities.
- In the classroom, I can work directly with individual students to chunk material, give extra time, and provide extension activities that are individualized for the students.
- I have improved my wait time to allow student to think and question the students further so that they can extend their thinking.
- Verbal responses to questions are given to virtual students so that they can record their ideas and make connections to their world and the new learning. *Recordings are on Schoology*
- Student in the classroom can show what they know by directly interacting with materials and explaining their thought processes.

by Laura Blood · September 5, 2020

All About Me

We want to get to know all of the friends in our class. Create a video stating your name and some other facts about you. You can include: who is in your family, favorite thing to do, favorite color, favorite movie, favorite food, what you want to be when you grow up, what makes you happy and more.

 Record a Response

Perfect

When something is perfect, it is as good as it can possibly be, and there is nothing wrong with it. How would you describe a perfect summer day?

